

① いくつでしょうか。

(1)

A diagram showing three columns of base ten blocks. The first column contains 100 small cubes arranged in a 10x10 grid. The second column contains 10 small cubes arranged in a vertical rod. The third column contains 3 small cubes arranged in a vertical rod. Dashed arrows point from each column down to a three-digit number line with vertical dashed lines separating the hundreds, tens, and ones places.

(2)

A diagram showing three columns of base ten blocks. The first column contains 100 small cubes arranged in a 10x10 grid. The second column contains 10 small cubes arranged in a vertical rod. The third column contains 3 small cubes arranged in a vertical rod. Dashed arrows point from each column down to a three-digit number line with vertical dashed lines separating the hundreds, tens, and ones places.

① なん円でしょうか。

(1)

A diagram showing three columns of base ten blocks. The first column contains 100 small cubes arranged in a 10x10 grid. The second column contains 20 small cubes arranged in two vertical rods of 10 cubes each. The third column is empty. Dashed arrows point from each column down to a three-digit number line with vertical dashed lines separating the hundreds, tens, and ones places. The character '円' (yen) is written to the right of the number line.

(2)

A diagram showing three columns of base ten blocks. The first column contains 100 small cubes arranged in a 10x10 grid. The second column is empty. The third column contains 3 small cubes arranged in a vertical rod. Dashed arrows point from each column down to a three-digit number line with vertical dashed lines separating the hundreds, tens, and ones places. The character '円' (yen) is written to the right of the number line.